WHAT IS THE AMERICAN COMMITTEE ON AFRICA?

The American Committee on Africa, founded in 1953, is devoted to supporting African people in their just struggle for freedom and independence. ACOA informs Americans about significant African issues, mobilizes public support for African freedom, and works for policies which will strengthen this aim.

HOW ACOA WORKS

- SUPPORTS African liberation movements in Africa and in exile. The Africa Defense and Aid Fund of ACOA was set up in 1957 to provide this assistance.
- PROVIDES a forum for African representatives through public meetings, news media, conferences, speaking tours.
- OPPOSES specific instances of U.S. corporate collaboration with apartheid through bank loans, trade, investments; and supports workers refusing to offload goods from white minority countries.
- ARRANGES meetings with African leaders and reports on decisions reached.
- TESTIFIES before the Congress and the United Nations, and lobbies in coordination with the Washington Office on Africa to end government policies which foster colonial and white minority rule.
- ACTS through the courts to end practices supporting white minority rule in Africa.
- MOBILIZES prominent sports and entertainment figures to "Say NO to Apartheid" and refuse to perform before segregated audiences in South Africa.
- PUBLISHES books, pamphlets, fact sheets and in-depth reports and distributes resources in cooperation with The Africa Fund (associated with ACOA).
- COMMUNICATES its message to Americans through radio, TV, press conferences, magazine articles, speakers, and occasional ads on issues of current importance.
- INITIATES action and cooperates with other organizations on public demonstrations, pickets, rallies.

ACOA depends entirely upon voluntary contributions to carry on these programs.
 Your contribution will help.

ZIMBABWE

battleground for freedom

Ninety-five percent of the 6.4 million people living in Zimbabwe (the African name for Rhodesia) are blacks ruled by an illegal white minority regime which has resolutely refused to acknowledge any democratic rights for the majority African population.

This regime unilaterally declared its independence from Great Britain in 1965 in order to avoid majority rule. Not one nation in the world has recognized its legitimacy. Yet, Ian Smith, the prime minister, has said there will be "no black rule in a thousand years."

For the blacks in Zimbabwe, life is "nasty, brutish and short." Wages are low. A black mine worker earns 26¢ a day for an 8-hour shift. In 1974, the average annual earnings for blacks were less than $650 against more than $7,100 for whites. The Rhodesian regime spends only $70 a year to educate a black child and more than $740 to educate a white child. And above all, Africans have no voice in making the laws that they must obey.

repression and resistance

Inside Zimbabwe, African students, workers and their families are protesting the policies of the Rhodesian regime. Those who demonstrate, sign petitions, or join political groups are sometimes expelled from school with no hope of getting an education. They may lose their jobs, be beaten or jailed.

Some two to three million people have been forcibly resettled in "protected villages" guarded by soldiers and surrounded by barbed wire fences. Establishment of these villages is the regime's response to guerrilla attacks. Officials contend that the villages were built to protect the defenseless local black population. But critics charge that they were constructed to protect the government by separating the freedom fighters from a vital base of support.

Africans in rural villages have commonly been a source of food, supplies and recruits for the liberation movement.

A recent investigation by the Catholic Commission for Justice and Peace in Rhodesia indicated that Rhodesian security forces have used torture and massive intimidation against people unwilling to move from their homes into these areas. These villages have been called concentration camps. At best they are overcrowded, filthy and lacking in the most basic necessities. Their inhabitants are subject to dusk to dawn curfews and rigid control of their movements.

Many Zimbabweans have fled from this violent repression to neighboring Botswana, Tanzania, Zambia and Mozambique. Since December 1974 more than 20,000 refugees have gone to Mozambique alone. Young men and women often choose to join the armed struggle for independence. But there are many who are too young or too old to fight, and many who can contribute in other ways to the future of a free Zimbabwe. The host countries for these refugees, themselves poor and facing many problems, can ill afford to take care of these extra thousands. Until the day when they can return home, the refugees want to take some responsibility for their daily lives. They want to farm cooperatively, to build schools and train their own medical personnel. They want to begin the process of building independence now, rather than simply surviving off the charity of others.

building self-reliance

A farm has been bought in Zambia for a self-reliance project so that Zimbabwe refugees can begin growing their own food. The Africa Fund has been asked by the African National Council of Zimbabwe to provide plows, hoes, shovels, pick axes, fertilizer and insecticides for this project.

There are also thousands of children in the refugee camps. Among the adults, there are teachers who gladly give of their services; but books, pencils and paper have to be paid for. The Africa Fund wishes to provide these basic school supplies. We have pledged to raise $10,000 for these agricultural implements and educational supplies.

inside zimbabwe

It is more difficult to assist the people inside Zimbabwe. But it is possible to give support to the families of political prisoners, to provide legal defense and to help expose the worst of the abuses — the beatings, the torture, the abduction of African leaders. The Africa Fund has pledged to raise at least $10,000 to carry on this critical work.

The Africa Fund's budget for 1976 is $170,978 for projects; $36,000 for education and research; and $55,825 for program coordination — for a total of $262,803. Contributions are deductible for income tax purposes.
